Engineering @ Directi

Directi is a leading multi-national, internet software company that builds innovative, mass-market, Web 2.0 products and services used by millions of users worldwide. Some of the challenges our engineering team deals with regularly:

- Managing globally distributed network applications spread over hundreds of servers

- Managing Communication and Collaboration apps used by millions of global users

- Efficiently generating informative reports from terabytes of data structures

- Building large-scale, low-cost, redundant and fast storage solutions

- Designing complex applications using NIO, multi-threading, and other cutting edge concepts

- Building intuitive interfaces using RIA, Ajax, and Usability engineering principles

Software Processes at Directi

At Directi, our products and deployments are unique. New releases are made live in the shortest time possible allowing our users to begin exploring new features immediately upon launch, which makes the feedback cycle quicker. Our unique model requires unique fundamentals. We borrow on Agile development practices and use a constantly evolving, lean software development process. Our beliefs manifest themselves in our attitude, development processes, office design, communication etc. We believe -

- Processes evolve vs Processes are fixed and rigid

- Different strokes for different projects vs One size fits all

- Change is welcome vs A Release spec is final

- Small and faster iterations vs Large and longer releases
